In today's Gospel, we read the first words spoken by Jesus in the gospel of John. They are not a teaching, a precept, or a challenge but a simple question: "What are you looking for?" We can be pretty sure that as disciples of John the Baptist, Andrew and John were not looking for the ordinary things in life. Today we are invited to look within ourselves and ask the question, "What am I really looking for?" What is the deepest desire of my heart and soul?

The disciples of John the Baptist had a great quest to encounter God. It is good for us to learn how their quest or longing was fulfilled. I think the most important words in today's gospel are found in Jesus' reply: "come and see." By taking the time to "come and see" they came to a deeper knowledge of Jesus as a person. Whether it is our longing for love, acceptance, understanding, the true experience of all these can happen only in our relationship with God.
